

Guided Bauhaus Tours— on Foot or by Bike

With over 490 colourful half-timbered houses, Celle as the 'Jewel on the Aller' presents the largest compact ensemble of its kind in Europe, and is one of the most splendid towns in Germany. Only few know that Celle is virtually a birthplace of the modern architecture 'Neues Bauen', and in regards to Bauhaus it plays in the same league as the towns Weimar and Dessau. Not only is there a quantitative, but also a qualitative variety of wonderfully preserved buildings, which are still partially used according to their original purpose—e.g. the school 'Altstädter Schule', known as 'Glass School', attracted visitors from all over the world.

otto haesler

otto haesler (1880-1962) was one of the greatest architects of the 20th century. He is considered as one of the most important representatives of 'Neues Bauen' during the Weimar Republic, who revolutionised the housing in particular. Between 1906 and 1933 he worked as a freelance architect in Celle.

His settlements and buildings still characterise the cityscape today. After his time in the ducal town, he moved to Eutin in Schleswig-Holstein. He was, among other things, the Deputy Director of the building department of Lodz and Lviv and accompanied the reconstruction of the old town of Rathenow.

With his appointment as Professor and Head of the Department of Mechanisation and Industrialisation by the German Academy of Construction, he has reached the height of his career in 1951. haesler died in Wilhelmshorst near Potsdam in 1962.

Bauhaus Train

1 Principal's Villa

The house was originally designed for the principal of the Ernestinum Gymnasium. It is being used as a gallery since 2006.

2 Italian Garden

This settlement has basically remained unchanged and marks haesler's final breakthrough to new architecture.

3 St. Georg-Garten

The settlement is considered as the first row settlement in the style of 'Neues Bauen', and was praised by many architecture critics as a 'model settlement'.

4 Blumläger Feld

The residential group was haesler's last construction project in Celle. With this settlement, haesler achieved his goal of creating affordable housing for the less well-off population.

TRAVEL tip

Coffee House Kiess & Krause

The Coffee House Kiess & Krause has its beginnings around 1871 as a spit cake factory. Since then it has been renovated several times, and most recently just in time for the Bauhaus anniversary. The main features of the coffee house were created by Otto Haesler in 1928, including the beautiful newly upholstered seating niches which are now waiting to make it comfortable for many guests.
